Short Description	This methodology makes use of the a mutual interest among the learners of a group, in order to bring them together, cooperate and communicate, share knowledge and experience in order to gain knowledge in a specific topic [methods and tips are based around language learning among a multilingual group of people] Results: The methodology has had the expected results Good: Yes, since it has some very nice elements both in terms of group dynamics as well as the knowledge gained Proposed: It makes use of the mutual need and will to learn something and share knowledge - it could be used among diverse groups of learners to first pin-point interests and knowledge and secondly to help them come together and cooperate. It seems as a potentially good approach for supporting inclusion, retention and outreach and it could be used in the context of developing literacy capabilities. Weakness/potential risks: 1) potentially no common ground/interest is found among the learners, 2) problems in creating a warm climate among the learner,
